

What did you learn from the websites on careers in web design and development?

- These careers seem to pay pretty well with an average compensation of $148,339
- Three of the top five jobs were e commerce site development so it seems like e commerce is a pretty big industry, building shopping sites will be good to learn.
- Several of the jobs included java script, so that also seems valuable and important to learn.
- There are also quite a few UI development jobs so it is important to learn how people think and how to make things look good

What did you learn from this class in general?

- I have learned the basics of how to use html and css
- I have learned about elements of html and how to use them(body, div, p, a, etc)
- I have learned how to reference and manipulate these elements using css
- I have learned how to read basic html
- I have learned how to host a website on github
- I have learned how to use grid elements to place elements where i want them
- I have learned you can have grid within grids
- I have learned that grids aren't always the right answer

(word count 204)